I have reviewed the settlement reached and found it to be a totally unacceptable capitulation of the rights of the citizens for a free and honest market place.

How can the consumer be protected when a convicted monopolist does not suffer any penalty, does not agree to any real forced change in behaviour, not even a promise not to do it again?

The settlement can only be viewed as a total capitulation to microsoft by the US government.

The only hope for any real justice is the remaining states will persue the action until a real settlement is reached.
